Murder charged in O'Day death

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

Gerald Bernard Johnson, the 17-year-old Inkster youth held in the stabbing death of 18-year-old Robert O'Day Jr. at Romulus High School on January 31, has been formally charged with intent to kill, premeditated murder in the first degree.

Last Wednesday in 34th District Court in Romulus, Judge James B. Stone found probable cause for Johnson to be bound over for an arraignment of information in the Wayne County Circuit Court on June 19.

Stone made his decision after three hours of testimony by five witnesses, the prosecution and the defense. Robert O'Day Sr. was asked by the prosecution to leave the court room for the proceedings.

Of the five witnesses, only a police officer, called as an expert witness, testified on behalf of the defense. Three Romulus High School students, one teacher and an Inkster youth testified for the prosecution.

Silence filled the court room. More than 20 people, mostly friends and relatives of witnesses, attended this preliminary examination. Stone had to ask almost every witness more than once to speak louder. There was no court room drama, and little emotion on the part of the defendant or the witnesses.

However, the detailed accounts and descriptions of events leading up to the death of O'Day were dramatic.

"The preliminary exam determines if a crime has been committed and if the defendant committed the crime," said Sgt. Dan Snyder of the Romulus Police department.

Johnson has been in custody since apprehended. First, in the Wayne County Juvenile Home and since he was waived to be tried as an adult, has been confined to the Wayne County Jail without bond.

According to the medical exam from the Westland Medical Center, O'Day died from a single stab wound of a depth of five to six inches and ruled the death a homicide.

The tragedy occurred following a confrontation in the hall of Romulus High School between several Romulus wrestlers and several Inkster youths.

"We've had a lot of cooperation with school's faculty and students. When something happens like this in school you don't know what kind of response to expect," said Snyder.

Barden Cable connects city of Romulus

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

Watch out Showtime, MTV and Dr. Ruth - Romulus is finally wired for cable. "The system is complete," said Don Barden, president and owner of Barden Cable Company, commissioned to install cable wire in the city of Romulus back in 1982.

"We fully complied with the city in accordance with the contract. We can now begin connecting customers which will be an ongoing process. In any case, cable service is now available," said Barden.

"I will be sending a letter to the mayor and city council to this effect and 98.63 percent of the available subscriber base will have the potential for cable," he said. The city of Romulus has between 6,000 and 7,000 homes.

"The city of Romulus is a scarcely populated area with a lot of vacant land. It's been a long-term investment but we are glad to be finished. We can now accelerate our marketing to subscribe new customers," Barden said.

"This is a state of the art and as fine as any system. The channel capacity and the quality of the equipment is exceptional," he added. Barden was just recently awarded the contract to wire the city of Detroit.

The letter received by the mayor's office stated, "We sincerely appreciate the cable commission's cooperation in resolving many of the many problems that have arisen during the installation of the cable system in Romulus."

Councilman Barry Baumann, a staunch critic of the installation process said, "If it's true, I'm glad. I would like to see a map of what's been done and what hasn't. Many streets have been left out and I think that they should at least have the capacity to be wired."

"Bids on a cable contract were first received back in 1978. We awarded it to Comcast in January of 1982. At that time, it was agreed that 100 percent of the city would be wired. That would total 88 square miles of laid cable, city engineers thought. After the strand mapping was complete, it was discovered to be more than double that.

"Comcast came back and asked the city to waive the 100 percent requirement. The cable commission would not bend and Comcast withdrew their bid. It was then awarded to Barden after several concessions in the original contract including an ordinance change were granted," said Baumann.

Barden received at least two extensions with the penalties waived.

"All I can say, if the job's done, then we're happy," said Baumann.

No contest Voters defeat millage

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

The few ballots are in and all the votes are counted in the annual school board election. The only contest in this election, the millage renewal, was soundly defeated. There were no upsets on the school board. Incumbents and unopposed trustees, Mary King and Edward Wilkerson, won by a comfortable margin.

The contested item in this election was the 1.5 millage renewal for school maintenance. Like in March when it was previously defeated, it was again voted down Monday.

Five percent, or 828 people of the almost 15,000 registered voters in Romulus, came out to perform their duty on Monday. More than half - or 496 people - voted against the millage renewal. Three-hundred-thirty-eight people voted in favor. Of the 280 absentee ballots cast, 178 or almost two-thirds, voted down the renewal.

Light turnout at the 19 different polling places caused City Clerk Linda Choate to again emphasize that the election cost the same whether one or a thousand people vote. "Cost of an election is between $10,000 and $12,000. That would come out to over $10 per vote cast," said Choate.

School officials will not totally despair. Both incumbent board trustees look forward to their next four-year term and see positive results from the last four years.

Residents flee suspicious fire

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

A fire of suspicious origin at the Olympia Village Apartments off Merriman Road in Romulus early Wednesday morning is still under investigation.

Forty people including eight children and one newborn were evacuated from all 16 units of the burning building. No one was injured but a dog owned by the tenant in whose apartment the fire started died in the blaze.

Although the building was insured for $1.6 million, the damage is estimated at approximately $400,000 or more, according to Romulus Fire Chief Jim Haislip.

"The fire was fully involved and through the roof by the time our fire department arrived at 5:29 a.m. Twenty men on three trucks with pumps were able control the fire within 30 minutes," said Haislip who added that the fire was totally out by 7 a.m. but fire fighters were on the scene until noon.

"The fire department was on the scene in 15 minutes after we placed our call," said Otis Whaling, manager at the apartment for the last couple years.

"We are more than pleased with their performance in every aspect," he emphasized.

"The fire began in an upstairs apartment. The tenant had been asleep but awakened when the smoke alarms went off. He ran outside screaming and was heard by another upstairs tenant who alerted the fire department," Whaling said.

The entire building was soon evacuated. "I went to one apartment and kicked and kicked the door. Their van was parked in the lot so I knew they were home and there was a problem. I had to turn away because the smoke was so bad. Finally, she came to the window with her son and daughter and was able to escape," he recalled.

All but one of the 16 apartments were occupied. The four top units in the building were completely destroyed. The lower four units were heavily water-damaged. A fire wall separated eight other units in the same building and saved them from any destruction according to Whaling.

"Because it was so windy outside, only the top apartments had any smoke damage," he added.

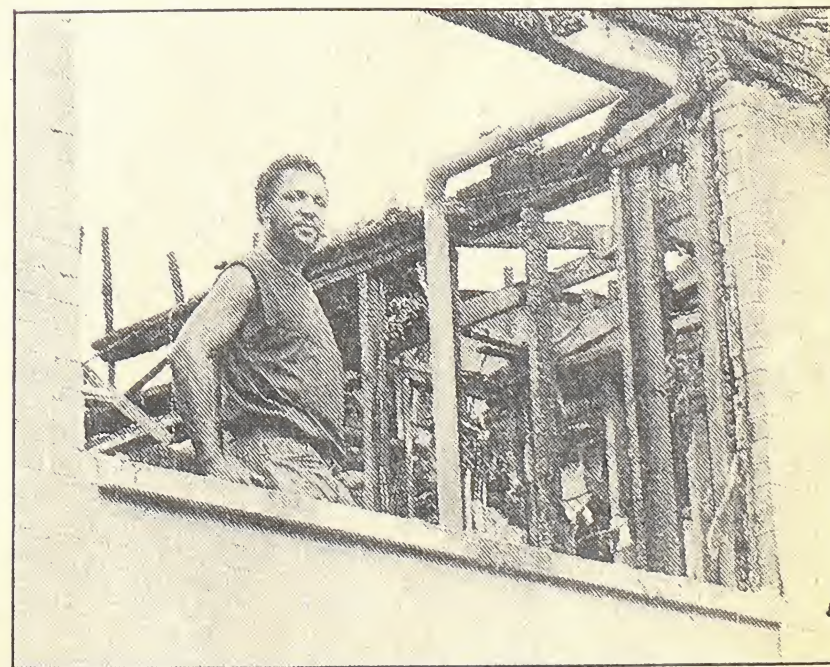

The six buildings that comprise Olympia Village Apartments were built about 20 years ago according to Whaling.

"Because this building is in the back of the complex, it could have gone totally unnoticed from passerbys on Merriman," Whaling said.

"We have been able to house people who have needed shelter. Everybody got together and helped each other," he said.

"It was a pretty serious fire," said Haislip. "We were fortunate to get it out when we did."

"At least we were assured that the fire alarms worked well," noted Whaling.

Carlson dropped from race

By JOAN MARY DYER
ANP Staff Writer

A late afternoon announcement by Orville Tungate, chief deputy clerk of Wayne County, revealed that white rights advocate Gerald R. Carlson had been disqualified in his attempt to gain a place on the Aug. 5 primary ballot.

Tungate said he received a complaint from George Erdei, a candidate for the 38th District representative's post, which questioned Carlson's residency eligibility to appear on the ballot. A subsequent investigation by the office of the county clerk determined that Carlson was not a qualified elector at the time he registered for the primary race. Tungate said the decision was based on several statutes and an opinion by the attorney general.

Rumors that white rights advocate Gerald R. Carlson would seek public office had been confirmed on Friday by the office of the Wayne County Clerk.

Carlson was among four Republican and two Democratic candidates seeking the 38th District Representative post held by Rep. Justine Barns, a Democrat from Westland.

For the past several weeks, rumors circulated that Carlson had "returned to town" and would seek to challenge either the incumbent representative or to once again seek the post of U. S. Rep. William Ford, a Democrat from Taylor. Carlson, although denied support from the Republican party in the 1984 election, won some 40 percent of the vote in his challenge of Ford two years ago.

According to a spokesman from the office of the county clerk, Carlson had registered for both the representative's and the congressman's posts, but had withdrawn from seeking the Republican nomination to challenge Ford on Friday.

Carlson has been reported to have been a member of several right wing extremist groups, but has denied published reports linking him with the John Birch Society, the Ku Klux Klan and the American Nazi Party.

In addition to Erdei, the Republican primary ballot will list Joe Johnson and Kenneth L. Raupp. Vying to gain a spot on the Democratic ticket are incumbent Justine Barns, Daniel M. Ostrosky and Edward L. Zaleski.

Mike Bernier, chairman of Citizens for Erdei, said that a formal challenge was filed with the election division of the Wayne County Clerk stating that Carlson is ineligible to file for the primary. The complaint states that Carlson registered to vote in Wayne on May 16, 1986, and five days later registered in Westland which would render him ineligible to file for the Republican primary by the June 3 deadline.

"I feel that as a Republican candidate, it is my responsibility to challenge Carlson's eligibility to run for this seat in the Republican primary," Erdei said. "Let the Democrats take care of their own backyard. Carlson's political ideology is out of step with both major parties."

Erdei called Carlson an "embarrassment" to his party and charged that he is an "opportunist looking for a legitimate podium from which to pronounce his radical philosophies." Gerald Carlson, Erdei said, "is not a Republican."

The final performance of the Romulus Junior High School band for the 1986 season.

With state honors

Local bands hit high note

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

A standing ovation goes out to the two Romulus Junior High School bands who received the highest honors awarded by the Michigan School Band Orchestra Association at the State Band Festival last month.

Both the 60 member Concert Band and 78 member Symphonic Band won first division or "superior" ratings at the Festival under the direction of Richard Kruse, band director.

Mary King

She has worked for the school system since 1968 coming to Romulus from Detroit with her husband Charles and four children. So far the King family has graduated their two oldest daughters, Leah and Lori, from the Romulus school system. Albert and Mary will both be in the high school next year. King will be 54 years old this year.

King said she saw a need to be on the school board. "After five years working in Compulsatory Education, which teaches children who have been tested below average in reading and math, I felt I had some knowledge but needed more. I knew I wanted to help," said King.

Last year, King received "The Keys to Boardmanship." These are received after a certain number of hours are worked. "I am very proud," she admitted.

She is also proud of her school board. "We are a working board. I feel we have stabilized the school system. The board breaks up into smaller groups to study specific topics. I am on the policy committee. We work well together, We vote our own way but come together as a board," she said.

"In the future, we hope to have every child computer literate. We have a fantastic computer program," Kind stated.

"We want to insure a strong Vo-Tech program and a high academic program.

We can have both. There's a lot of challenge out there, Romulus is on the move. The graduating class of 1986 received the highest number of academic awards of any Romulus class in many years. You'll be seeing a lot from Romulus."

Edward Wilkerson

He and his wife Lorraine moved to Romulus when they built their house ten years ago. They have four children, three in high school and one will graduate next year. Wilkerson has been active in the P.T.O. for eight years and past president for three years. He has worked as a tool and die journeyman for 17 years and as a computer programmer in the same industry for 14 years. He presently works for Republic Tool and Die.

"I believe in accountability, especially in financial affairs. It's important to balance the budget," he stressed. Wilkerson also serves as chairman of the finance committee.

"I feel the entire school board is accountable to the whole community," he added.

He sees much more work to finish. "There's been a lot of hard times," he said.

"I feel we have one of the best school systems in the state. Our computer program is well recognized. The past few years have seen the school system move by leaps and bounds. We've made promises and filled those promises. I feel the board has done a good job."

Romulus roads pave path for future progress

Romulus roads will be paved with more than good intentions because of the concerted efforts of local, county and state officials.

Last month, the Wayne County Commission approved an $8 million bond issue through the Michigan Transportation Fund which provides nearly $1 million for paving and widening of Ecorse from Wayne to Merri-man Road in the city of Romulus.

Wayne County Commissioner Milt Mack commented, "Wayne County's commitment to improving the infrastructure of the city of Romulus recognizes the potential economic development the county sees in Romulus. I will continue to work to try to direct the resources of the county to continue economic development in the city of Romulus."

Of the 1986-87 proposed Budget for the city of Romulus, Mayor Beverly McAnally said, "The most notable increase is that provided for roads. Although road improvement is not at the level we would like, any further increase in expenditures for that activity will have to show a corresponding decrease in some other activity."

The Paving Maintenance Program was adopted by the Romulus City Council members last year according to Department of Public Works Director Robert Plank. "The work will be done this year," he said.

Roads tentatively scheduled for resurfacing under this program are: Herman Street west of Wayne; Smith Road between Merriman and Middlebelt; Heyer between Beverly and Van Born; and Beverly between Cogswell and Hever.

Total cost of Phase I of this project paid by the city for five years is $201,945. Although work is expected to be completed later this year.

Elsewhere in the city, between Eureka and Pennsylvania, the Warhman Road project is being funded with $400,000 through the Tax Increment Financing Authority. TIFA is a state program which provides local communities with a method of tax collection and a means of payment, according to Plank.

The Romulus Department of Public Works maintains 100 miles of city roads. Fifty miles of county roads and 12 miles of state highways traverse the city.

"Seventy percent of city roads are hard surfaced," noted Plank.

"If development continues at the present rate in Romulus, it is hoped that enough revenue will be generated in four to five years so the city council could budget more money to local road funds," said Plank.

"At the present time, road maintenance uses 71 percent of the total road budget. Traffic control, pavement marking, ditching and other items account for the remaining road budget. Good ditches and good drainage are critical to a good road," he emphasized.

Expenditures for the road department include $61,600 for asphaltic emulsion used for dust control by the DPW four to five times a year, "depending on the year and the weather," said Plank.

"Paved roads are easily maintained. Gravel roads need to be patched more frequently and graded regularly," he concluded. "There's a lot of competition for money used on road projects at the county and state level. The mayor has led the fight for improved roads in Romulus and the council has seen the need and voted in favor of good roads."

Peace dove lands at airport

"Traditionally, the city of Romulus has been opposed to airport expansion," said a spokesperson for Wayne County Executive William Lucas last week when the $140 million airport expansion and renovation was announced.

The program outlined three phases of the program including a permanent solution to the ethylene glycol odor problem. The centerpiece of the project would be a crosswind runway to be built only after appropriate environmental studies have been done.

The announcement by airport officials caught local officials off guard. Romulus Mayor Beverly McAnally immediately wrote and requested the Wayne County Executive Office for all information about the recently announced airport expansion plans so that the impact on the city could be determined.

The letter explained, "It is not my purpose to cause any difficulty or to adversely affect the comfort and safety of the traveling public, neither do I wish to have others adversely affect the comfort, safety and quality of life of my fellow residents in the city of Romulus."

But the city of Romulus is breaking with tradition. The day the county recieved the letter from the mayor, a special meeting was conducted with top officials from both sides.

"Our staff people had a briefing about the airport project and we are satisfied. Bob Braun, (deputy director of air-

Braun stated that the results from the environmental impact studies will take 18 to 24 months, but that "The city of Romulus will be involved. Many things need to be done. We need community coordination and active involvement. Mostly, we need agreement on the issues."

news in brief

THE ROMULUS SENIOR CENTER was awarded a grant for $4,857 for weatherization in the form of thermo windows and insulation for the center. State Representative James A. Kosteva announced the approval of the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging for the grant.

Kosteva said, "This funding is important to the comfort and well-being of the senior citizens whose lives are enriched by this well-used center." The Belleville Senior Center also received a similar grant. A proposal for the grant was submitted by the city of Romulus.

A VIETNAM VETERANS' MEMORIAL in the city of Romulus may become a reality. Councilman Barry Baumann suggested before council the possibility of a Vietnam Veterans' Memorial to honor those who served and died for our country.

"I thought we should do something for these special soldiers," said Baumann. Members of the city council unanimously approved the motion.

SENTENCED WITH 5-15 YEARS IN PRISON is Romulus resident James Richardson II in the stabbing death of Leland Winnie of Taylor in the parking lot of a lounge on Middlebelt south of Northline on Feb. 28 of this year.

"He was originally charged with first-degree murder and on May 6 the charge was reduced to second degree. He pleaded guilty to that charge," said Sgt. Dave Early of the Romulus Police department. Richardson was sentenced on June 5 in Wayne County Circuit Court before Judge William Cahalan.

On hold: Incinerator officials await legal opinion

By RAY DAY
ANP News Editor

Officials at the Central Wayne County Sanitation Authority are playing the waiting game these days, a game that is sure to delay the current renovation project, according to Ulrich Bauser, executive director.

"Right now we're waiting for word from our attorney," Bauser said. "He specializes in environmental issues and we're waiting for a recommendation from him."

The delay at the Dearborn Heights-based garbage incinerators stems from a May 20 order to stop work from the Michigan Air Pollution Control Commission. According to Bauser, the state agency told Central Wayne officials that the demolition and future construction being done on the incinerators could not continue until the Authority acquired a permit from the State of Michigan, a new regulation, Bauser said, and one that could set the project back about six months.

The incinerators are located on Inkster Road in Dearborn Heights and are owned by the five member cities of the Authority — Wayne, Westland, Inkster, Dearborn Heights and Garden City. The plant was originally designed to burn garbage and refuse from the five cities but was shut down by the federal government in 1982 after it failed to meet new guidelines in the federal clean air act.

Officials at the Authority went to the voters last year and received a 1-mill tax increase in order to complete an $11.2 million revamping program that would put the incinerators back in line with clean air standards and allow the five communities to return to burning trash instead of sending the refuse to landfills.

Bauser reported that the plans for the new incinerator plant, which will be complete with electrostatic reciprocators, a change from the dry-gas method of burning used before, were sent to the Wayne County Health Department early in 1985. To date, a permit has not been issued by the county government, although several letters have been sent to Authority officials indicating that approval is soon to come.

Construction on the new plant was set to begin June 2. The demolition of the three smoke stacks now at the incineration facility had already started but was stalled May 20 due to the state order.

Bauser called the new regulation an unfair changing of the rules and cited a potential increase in the costs of the project as a result of the current delay.

"We have always filled out our permits in Wayne County. After you spend $300,000 of the taxpayers' money, do you go and change the rules?" Bauser questioned. "It's not just a matter of filling out a new application for the state and getting it back. We're not talking about a delay of a couple of days."

The Authority director indicated that completing a new application for the state officials could take months. In addition, the state agency may not approve of the incinerator plans, causing the project to return to square one after 15 months into the project, he said.

Aside from the added permit, Bauser fears that bids secured for the construction project in December may not be valid until the time both the county and state governments okay the project. This problem, he said, could boost the price tag of the project and could even force Authority officials to request additional funding from the five communities.

"How could we go to the voters again? I couldn't stand up in front of the voters again and ask them for something I don't believe in," Bauser remarked. "Even if there is one piece of additional equipment needed, we based the millage on what was required in that judgment order."

Bauser referred to a judgment order of 1984 from the U.S. District Court in Detroit. According to the Bauser, the order spelled out the steps necessary to get the incinerators burning again, steps which were considered in the original plans and permits, budgeted and taken to the voters.

Even without the state permit, the Authority project still has to receive project approval at the county level. According to Bauser, county officials who were ready to put their stamp of approval and issue a permit have backed off waiting to see what happens with the state permit request.

"Wayne County wants to approve it," Bauser said, "but because of the Michigan Air Control Commission they cannot in good conscience issue a permit."

Local psychic foretells 1986 year-end predictions

Rosemary Near

By JOAN MARY DYER
ANP Staff Writer

(Astrologist-physic Rosemary Near, who hosts a program on WCAR, takes a look ahead into the last six months of 1986 to relate her general predictions to our readers.)

Between June and the new year, according to Rosemary Near, the U.S. will see a pride in the American workers' products or services. American buyers also will be looking for quality American-made goods, she said.

"Red, white and blue packaging will be something the 'mom, home and apple pie' part of ourselves will really respond to," according to Near. "You'll also see this American dream theme reflected in story lines of the soaps, in the news, and in people's conversations. It will be a wonderful time for people to network with others, because the team effort will work now if it's used properly."

Near has provided radio callers with insights into their romantic, financial and health concerns for the past three years during the 10 to 11 p.m. time slot on the local station. She also does private readings and is a regular contributor to several publications.

Her predictions, she said, are a "road map" to provide insights to individuals who then can make their own personal choices on how to act on the information. For example, her general predictions listed here are given as a general guideline - each individual then can use what information they wish, make their own decisions and be responsible for them.

"In August," Near continued, "if people are treated right, they will become very cooperative. Any business or service that neglects either its employees or customers, may go 'belly-up' as a result. People want to be made to feel special and they don't want to hear about what they don't excel at. Sincere compliments will pave the road to prosperity, and we will find that success is reached on the arm of those we help, or have helped in the past."

"Starting in September, after the wedding-out process of August, we'll be in high gear. The constant frustration of summer will finally come to an end and we'll see all of our seeds come to fruit," Near continued. "There will be plenty of employment for anyone who wants to work, and the social service system will be weeding out those who really don't need help. Anyone on assistance now will be able to get the support to take care of themselves. Dependency without return for it will be disfavored, and those folks will have their safety net jerked away. One way or another, things are changing and it really is for everyone's highest good. Excuses are seen through clearly."

Near predicts some "rough weather conditions" at the end of September and recommends a "Plan B" when scheduling outdoor events at that time.

In the following month, according to Near, two eclipses may trigger changes in partnerships and relationship of all kinds.

"November will highlight a lot of humanitarianism. People helping people, public work being done and unity among the masses unlike anything yet so far," Near said. "All who participate in these projects will be blessed many times over. The blessings may not come from where we expect it, but don't resist changes because those are blessings."

Even if they are disguised as a problem, let the flow continue - don't resist.

"Anyone who thinks they know exactly how the world operates will be challenged in December. No 'locked shut' minds will be left unrattled. It seems that after all the hard work and the frustrations of the last summer, individuals will feel that they deserve an absolutely perfect Christmas," Near said.

She noted that people should be cautious of letting minor problems or imperfections become something that ruins our Christmas. Near advises people to look at their accomplishments and to view mistakes and problems as "things we needed to learn."

According to Near, New Year's Eve should be a very special day and evening. She predicts a consciousness raising where barriers will be healed between religions, nationalities, income levels, age groups and races.

"If everyone will, for just this one day, put aside all thoughts of separation, we may actually see the beginnings of a true world peace," Near said.

Fireworks users get 'zapped' in some cities

By RAY DAY
ANP News Editor

Those proud and patriotic local folks wanting to get a jump start on a bang-up Fourth of July had better read over local fireworks ordinances before getting zapped for possession.

That word of advice comes from local police and fire chiefs who once again are reminding residents that most types of fireworks are illegal in Michigan, while all types are prohibited in some communities.

State law stipulates that all explosive fireworks are prohibited including firecrackers, torpedoes, skyrockets and Roman candles. The law prohibits both the sale and use of these types of devices in addition to "any blank cratridge, pistol or toy in which explosives are used."

A permit or special permission is not required, under state law, for the following: paper caps that contain no more than .25 of a grain of explosives, toy pistols, sparklers with less than .0125 pounds of burning portion, filter sparklers not exceeding 1/8 inch diameter, toy snakes not containing mercury and matches.

"Basically, it's anything that does not explode," said an official from the Wayne police department, "although, we warn against their use."

Even with the scores of warnings from local fire officials and educators of the potential for injury when using fireworks as simple as sparklers - the tips of the simple metallic rod can reach up to 1000 degrees - the boom in road-side fireworks shops has hit the area in full force. But even with such a strict rule regarding the sale, transportation and sale of fireworks, one local dealer said there is plenty of money to be made in selling legal July 4th favors.

Brent Charnock, used car supervisor for Charnock Oldsmobile in Dearborn, has been setting up shop along Michigan Avenue in Inkster for about four years now. Although he admitted that local fire officials are strict and continually ensure that his fireworks are the legal type, Charnock said that his business is booming and fireworks are easy to obtain.

"I sell basically the assorted packages that consist of all the legal fireworks," Charnock said. "They have to be approved by the Inkster Fire Department. They watch you like a hawk."

Included in his collection of things that go boom, bang and pow in the night are sparklers, snap and pops, growing fountains and smoke bombs. Although an assortment of illegal fireworks would be bigger, Charnock explained that the potential of being prosecuted isn't worth the risk and extra profit.

"I don't mess with the illegal stuff," explained Charnock, "it's not worth the penalty. You can do enough business in legal fireworks so you don't have to mess with illegal."

Although the state law is basically followed exactly in most cities, a few exceptions are sometimes unknown by residents in western Wayne County. Below are listed the regulations for use and sale of fireworks in the cities served by the Associated Newspapers.

■ WAYNE - The sale and use of all fireworks - including sparklers and caps - is prohibited by local ordinance and fire code.

■ WESTLAND - Operates under state law. The law says that communities may issue licenses. Westland chooses not to.

■ CANTON - Operates under state law exactly.

■ ROMULUS - Operates under state law exactly.

■ INKSTER - Operates under state law exactly.

■ BELLEVILLE - Operates under state law exactly.

'A crisis in crime'

Kelly calls for assistance in reduction program

By JOAN MARY DYER
ANP Staff Writer

Citing what he termed a "crime crisis" in Michigan, Attorney General Frank J. Kelly called on participants in the Speakers Conference on Crime Prevention to take action in the war against crime.

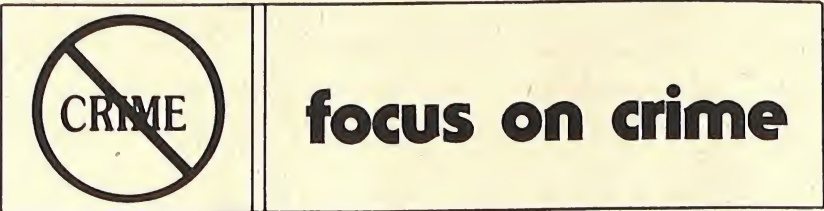

"If anything is to be done, it will be done by the people in this room, or the people who should be here," Kelley told the law enforcement officers, social services representatives and elected officials who attended the conference on Monday in Romulus.

In his keynote address, Kelley said, "Dante once said, 'The hottest places in hell are reserved for those who remain neutral in a time of great crisis.' I hope this conference will

"Our actions speak louder than our words. We profess to believe in deterrents and to value justice, but refuse to spend the money required."

motivate each of us to insure that we do not remain indecisive in the face of the problems confronting our criminal justice system."

Kelley admits there is no "quick fix" to solve the crime crisis. If the basic problems haven't been solved in the family, the community, the schools, the workplace and the church, Kelley told the audience, a simple solution is not available.

The attorney general said, however, that the passage of two bills now under consideration would give law enforcement agencies needed "tools" to deal with crime - particularly drug enforcement.

Adoption of House Bill 5204 would increase the penalty for drug possession by adults within 500 feet of any school building and would increase the penalty for adults supplying drugs to children. Kelley called the bill a "strong deterrent" to those who prey on children.

against the large drug dealers. He noted that federal agents have been successful in their battle against drug dealers because they have this tool available to them.

The attorney general said he answers charges that the electronic surveillance is intrusive with the statement that he feels the impact of drug dealers on society is more intrusive and offensive.

Kelley called for tools to "bring us into the 20th century" in crime fighting methods.

"Our actions speak louder than our words," Kelley said. "We profess to believe in deterrents and to value justice, but refuse to spend the money required. We believe that safe streets are to be had cheaply and we, thereby, trifle with the wicked, make sport of the innocent and encourage the calculators to go ahead to be a part of a corrupt society. When justice suffers so do we all. The history of the '80s here in Michigan will be determined in this area by people like you."

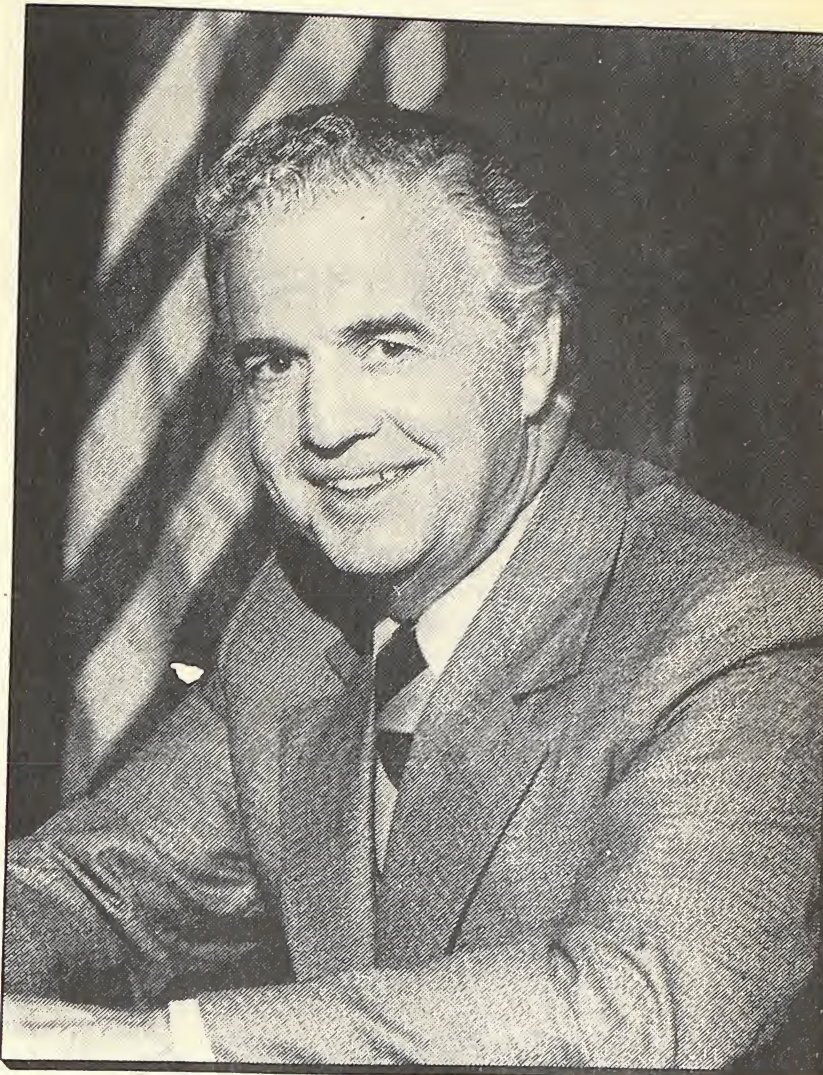

"History is looking at you," Kelley continued. "Michigan what will you do? Are you going to get control of the situation, are you going to hold crime to a irreducible minimum, or are we just going to sit around and talk about it? I think it's up to people like yourself with your education, your backgrounds, your tremendous experience. You have to change the attitudes. You have to change the attitudes on the execution of the law, you have to change the attitudes on the preparation and implementation of the laws. We have to do something." Kelly noted that he would like to "have a Utopia where the state did not have to interfere in our lives at all, but it is not going to work and we have to change or the malcontents in our society will destroy us."

"We do have a crime crisis in our state," Kelley concluded. "But, I am here because I have faith in you and I believe when the history of the '80s is written it will show that you did not remain neutral in the crisis and that you worked diligently to solve the problems, to change the attitudes and save our state."

Moderators of the conference included Representative James Kosteva of Canton and Representative Justine Barns of Westland. Panelists discussed sentencing options, the juvenile justice system, crime victims rights and the special needs of preventing crime against senior citizens.

(Next week facts on juvenile crime and punishment will be presented.)

Michigan Attorney General Frank Kelly said the people of the state have the power to make changes. "You have to change the attitudes. You have to change the attitudes on the execution of the law, you have to change the attitudes on the preparation and implementation of the laws."

McCusker - Panter

Theresa Anne McCusker and Gene L. Panter were united into marriage March 22 in a double-ring ceremony in Kalamazoo. The Rev. Joe Dailey officiated.

McCusker is the daughter of Adeline and William McCusker, both of Westland. Panter is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Panter of Swartz Creek, Mich.

The ceremony was accented with music by Rose Daniel who sang "The Wedding Song," "Theme from Ice Castles" and "The Search Is Over."

The bridal gown was an ivory satin with a lace overlay bodice and open lace sleeves. The bridal bouquet featured silk, ivory roses and gardenias.

Participating in the ceremony were Jacqueline Baron of Westland as the maid of honor and Matthew Sharpe of Flint as the best man.

A reception followed the ceremony at Mountain Jack's restaurant in Portage, Mich. The two have made their home in Portage.

McCusker is a graduate of Wayne Memorial High School and Western Michigan University. She works as a special education teacher for the Portage Public Schools.

Panter is a graduate of Swartz Creek High School and is a junior at Western Michigan University.

Patton - Johnson

Brenda Lee Patton and William Johnson were married in a private ceremony in Gary, Ind., May 20.

Patton is the daughter of Mrs.

Drusel Patton of Inkster.

After a short honeymoon, the couple took their residence in Gary.

Seeing red

Residents deserve to be informed

There's never time to do it right but always time to do it over.

Wayne city officials learned that portion of Murphy's law the hard way recently but they should be forgiven.

It's no secret that the sidewalks in the city of Wayne are in dire need of repair. Many of the older neighborhoods date back to the city founding and the sidewalks in those residential districts are by no means "spring chickens."

It's also no big secret that the city fathers have been considering a program to upgrade those sidewalks, a program that actually began last year with the laying of new concrete walks along the west side of Michigan Avenue.

But what is a secret, or at least is hazy in the minds of many Wayne residents, is the policy that the city is using for the sidewalk improvement program. The questions are plentiful and the answers scarce many times as to which sidewalks will be repaired, when, by whom and why.

The Wayne DPS began marking city walkways this spring with red and yellow dots. No word was sent to the public or press as to what was happening and why. As far as many residents knew, some crazy people had just come upon a huge supply of spray paint and began to dot the city with the fruits of their fortune.

That analogy is perhaps unfair, but the lack of information to the residents is just as unfair. The public and people in the city of Wayne have a right to know what is happening and they deserve to know before action has taken place.

City council members hesitantly adopted a policy for the sidewalk improvement program at their meeting last week. The policy was designed to say that all sidewalks in need of repair should be improved and that eventually all residents would be included in the program.

The policy also addressed the areas of the city that currently lack walkways. A policy was established to lay walks in some of those areas sometime in the future.

This policy should have been adopted last year, before the entire sidewalk improvement program began. Residents should have been informed of the program this year and should have been prepared for the painting of a red or yellow dot on their front walk.

In addition, since this program is a city-wide one, city administrators should inform the entire city all at once. Indeed, repaving the sidewalks for the entire city is a huge project and one that will take many years to complete. But let the residents know that fact and give everyone an idea of when they might be included in the program.

After an article in our paper last week, council members feared a bombardment of residents at a public hearing this month. After some city administrators polled the public about the "proposed" city program, they realized the Wayne population was very much in the dark about the sidewalk improvement program.

While we realize that the program is sure to rile some feathers as the taxpayers are again asked to dish out more money because of the actions of the local government, we feel it is a good and fair policy to be open and informational at the very start of any project. And, while we understand the city administration's reasoning behind limiting information so not to create a city-wide uproar, we feel that uproar will be less intense if the citizens don't approach an issue with a hazy and unclear understanding of it.

We deserve to know what is going on, who is going to be affected, how much it's going to cost and why all of this is being done. We deserve to know before the project begins at square one.

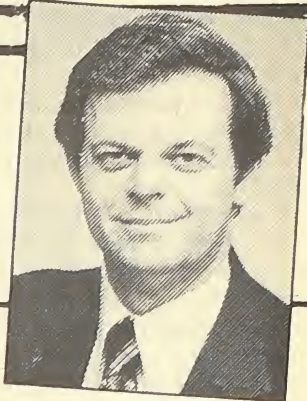

The next time around, before painting the red dots, paint a clear picture of the entire project - the very positive benefits it will provide for all residents and the unescapable temporary financial burden it will impose - to all residents of the city and help eliminate any misunderstandings that may arise due to sheer ignorance.

flying solo

By David J. Willett, Publisher

Here's lookin' at you, kid

There's something about seeing with your own eyes that which is legend. And so it was that during our recent trip through Los Angeles we went "lookin'" at the Hollywood sites.

Much like observing the Washington Monument or Empire State Building for the very first time, we usually stand in awe of that which we have heard so much about.

Hollywood, in particular, has been built up in the minds of the world as the home of the movie magic that has intrigued us all.

Read a newspaper, scan the magazines and tabloids at the checkout stands, or watch the tube. Repeatedly, the imagery of the west coast mythmakers hammers into us the message that Hollywood is the equivalent of Atlantis, Mecca, and Oz all in one . . . and so it is.

I confess that although I had been in L.A. and had passed through several times, I had always had a desire to play Hollywood tourist. My appetite was peaked after having seen the Academy Award festivities at close range in the late 70s, holding an Oscar, and visiting Universal Studios. But it wasn't until recently that I had felt the pulse of it all.

Susan, Deb and I visited the shrine of movie-star idealism, "Mann's Chinese Theater." We stood and looked down at the pavement squares where "stars" inscribed their names and left their imprints in the hope of immortality.

We took a van tour of the stars homes, gawked at the guests arriving for a party at Pickfair, snapped pictures of Jimmy Stewart's home, and stretched to see Burt Reynolds' house through the greenery.

We walked on the "Walk of Fame," paused and pondered at the corner of Hollywood and Vine, and circled around Burbank. We toured Universal Studios and saw how they work their movie-illusions for our entertainment (and $4.50).

We drove up into the mountains along Mulholland Drive, and peered out at the letters H-O-L-L-Y-W-O-O-D visible from many of the "higher priced" homes in the valley . . . for sure, I mean really.

Of course if you can afford $10 to $15 million for a home as was the value of many of the estates we viewed, it is perhaps redundant to talk of higher priced homes.

It was, to be sure, a treat to see it, experience it, and wallow in it with the rest of the stargazers. But just as with most everything else in life, some of the magic melts away when it is no longer just a celluloid image.

It is no great secret that Hollywood has become aged, a tad seedy and something less than Camelot. I hope that this revelation doesn't shock anyone but . . . well here goes. "weeds grow in Engelbert Humperdinck's lawn just as they do in yours".

Prophetically almost, as I stood (in the rain no less) and stared at the concrete footprints of Humphrey Bogart and placed my shoe over his bigger-than-life prints, I realized they were not as big as my own.

And as I knelt down to see the signature of Gary Cooper I could not help but notice the hairline cracks, spreading across his immortality already.

All too soon we will depart from this life, and what was will be but a memory. Whether there remains behind a mark that says, that we had walked this earth, will not be determined by tangible monuments, but rather our immortality lies in our works and the caliber of our achievements.

See you next week.

Readin', 'riting and refinance

Although the Wayne-Westland school district supplied an abundance of information and statistics to back up their request for a 2-mill tax increase for a two-year period, voters turned down the request by an unofficial count of 3,195 to 2,284.

School board members, administrators and educators have termed the increase "critical" for the continuance of quality education in the district. Still, with a impressive educational campaign conducted on behalf of the millage, the voters said "no."

Now will come a time of evaluation by the school district and its various committees to determine whether or not another request is feasible. The alternatives, we have already been informed, are across-the-board cuts with accompanying teacher lay-offs.

In the literature distributed by the Funding Effective Schools Committee, a citizens' group which supported the millage, the following cuts were predicted in the event of a millage failure: (1) Reduction of the elementary school day by 15 minutes; (2) Reduction of elementary vocal and instrumental music; (3) Reduction of secondary programs; (4) Reduction of the number of supplies and learning materials for student use, and (5) Reduction of repairs and maintenance to emergency only status and a halt to the replacement of old and worn-out equipment.

In effect, the voters have told the district to go ahead with the proposed cuts. We wonder whether the voters are fully aware of the repercussions or whether they feel that a quality educational program can be continued in their district after the cutbacks are made.

Some people may blame the millage defeat on a petition drive which asks for a grand jury investigation into the loss of some 1983-84 school aid funds due to questionable counting practices. Although petitioners deny the timing of their drive was made to have an impact on the voting, there remains a cloud over the district regarding those past practices. Whether or not voters see the present administration as being implicated in those past practices is another question which remains unanswered.

On the other hand, we wonder whether this millage defeat and the defeat of other area millage requests is evidence that the ominous predictions of a panel of educators six years ago may have been true. At that time the panelists, who included school board members, administrators, teachers and a labor mediator, predicted that school millage requests would face stiff opposition in the coming decade because of several factors. They pointed out that an increasing number of parents are choosing to send their children to private schools and, therefore, are reluctant to support two systems. In addition, there is a dwindling number of parents who have school-age children due to the decline in the birth rate and the general aging of our population.

We have no answers. The millage apparently was a needed one to continue quality education, but the voters have the last word and their last word was "no."

Humane Society to launch campaign for new shelter

By RAY DAY
ANP News Editor

The almost 14,000 new animals entering the Michigan Humane Society shelter in Westland may soon have a new, modern building to call home if the current fundraising venture for the Society is a success.

Kathy Blauet, shelter manager, reported that the Society will be launching the second part of a major fundraising drive this fall in hopes of netting the $1.3 million needed to construct a new animal shelter. The new building, when complete, will feature animal runs, drainage and proper ventilation, items sorely lacking at the current facility, according to Blauet.

Blauet reported that the current shelter, located on Marquette Road, just east of Newburgh in Westland, was constructed in 1971, although it was not designed with animals in mind. Aside from falling ceiling tiles, rotting counters and peeling paint, the shelter has never been equipped with an animal run, Blauet said, nor has proper ventilation been something of which to speak.

The building was designed by an office-building architect and was built very much like an office complex, according to Blauet. Because of the cramped corridors and lack of space in the busy seasons for the shelter, some animals must be refused. As an example, Blauet said that a pony now staying at the Society is kept in a small utility closet at night with hay thrown on the floor for a bed.

The new building will be the second phase of a renovation project at the Westland animal shelter, following the construction of a $2 million clinic last year. The clinic is a non-profit facility operated by the Michigan Humane Society. Patients are usually charged for services, however, those unable to afford pet care are never refused, according to Blauet.

save the shelter

More than 14,000 animals come through the doors of the Westland animal shelter each year. Only about 2,500 of the strays and animals given up by their owners ever find a new home, Blauet said, leaving a majority of the animals an ill-fated destiny of death.

While kittens and an overabundance of the furry, little feline critters are a problem at this time of year, Blauet reported that animal overpopulation in general is a serious problem and is one that is escalating each year. Most animals that are brought into the shelter by their owners are placed behind the steel bars and locked in the tight cages because the owners were moving, the pet was too much to handle or "he was just too old."

Blauet was adamant in saying that a pet is not just another of the disposable items in the 1980s world and that the adoption of an animal should be taken as a major responsibility.

"What it boils down to is an irresponsible pet owner. If you're not willing to take care of that pet until it dies from old age, don't get it," said Blauet.

Even with the sad facts pointing to the deaths of thousands of dogs, cats, birds, hamsters, rabbits and even alligators each year, a brighter part of the shelter is obviously the adoption process, Blauet said. Dogs and cats in the shelter usually have a $25 adoption fee. Rabbits and some other animals are not subject to the fee.

In addition to the adoption fee and the signing of an agreement ensuring that the new owner will be a "responsible pet owner," Blauet said that all animals, male and female, must be spayed or neutered. The charge for this service is $15 for males and $25 for females. There are no exceptions to this rule, Blauet said, as it has been designed to curb the animal overpopulation problem.

Not all people entering the shelter who want to adopt a pet come out with a new dog or cat, however. Blauet explained that at least three out of every 10 would-be adopters are refused. The reasons for the refusal are varied many times, she said, but generally it is because of young children at home, apartment life where pets are not allowed or a poor past history with pets.

And although that means about 33 percent of the population are not ideal pet lovers, the majority of the people in the area can make that claim and, according to Blauet, the drive to build a new animal shelter is sure to be a success.

Humane Society officials are hoping to garner the support of both the business and residential community to raise the $1.3 million. Details of the program are expected to be released in September.

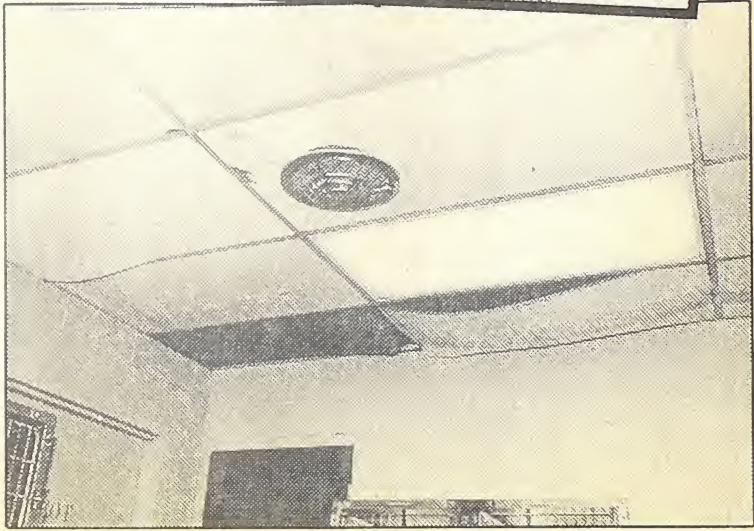

Until then, Blauet said she hopes the area will continue to support the Society which is totally dependent on charitable donations. Even more than the new building, however, the shelter director said she hopes pet owners will use a little TLPC, tender loving pet care, and continue to be responsible animal owners.

The Associated Newspapers is pleased to serve as a co-sponsor of the drive to build a new animal shelter. Included in the long list of fundraising efforts planned for this year is a special food-tasting extravaganza expected to attract thousands of people and well-known personalities. More details will come later this summer.

ANP photos by Chief Photographer Lothar E. Konietzko

Currently, animals are housed in small cages located in cramped corridors and rooms at the Westland Humane Society shelter. These rooms, Kathy Blauet, shelter director, said are also lacking proper ventilation and features needed for proper keeping of animals. At the right, falling ceiling tiles give a hint to the condition of the 15-year-old shelter, a condition that Blauet feels is evidence of the need for a new facility.

By Park E. Gregory

Last Friday evening as O.D. Mordoff was bringing home his cows for Isaac Wilburn's place west of the village he found the body of a man lying face downwards on the ground, in his pasture lot about 10 rods from the Wabash R.R. He hurried to Justice Stewart's and gave notice, a jury was impaneled and they proceeded to the spot where he lay, and after viewing him, brought him to town hall where an inquest was held Saturday afternoon. To look at him as he lay on the ground one would have thought that he died a peaceful death, except for his mouth and nose being full of blood: from this, grave doubts arose in the minds of many and after some hesitation on the part of Justice Stewart a post-mortem examination was ordered which disclosed the following injuries: breast bone crushed in, left collar bone broken, first and second ribs broken on left side and four ribs broken on right side, back bone and one leg injured. He was a young man of about 23 or 25 years old, 5 feet 9 inches tall, light brown hair and blue eyes, had a photograph of a boy in sailor suit in his pocket and two tin-types of young ladies and several small cheap trinkets. Was dressed in a good working suit with a clean calico shirt. On Monday, the last day of the encampment, he was seen in town with two partners but now both are missing, this shows foul play some where and everybody is waiting to see this dense mystery cleaned up and the guilty parties brought to justice. Sunday the scene of a struggle was discovered a short distance from where the body was laid and a pool of blood was found showing distinctly that there is more to be revealed and we hope there will be.

Three more weeks of school. Commencement July 2nd.

Smithville, Tenn: Some kind friend sent me several copies of the Enterprise for which I wish to thank them. As I read spicy pages I find many names familiar to me in other days and not forgotten now. Many pleasant memories rise before me as memory unlocks her golden casket and faces and scenes pass before my bewildered gaze in rapid succession. Belleville has passed through many changes since then and were I suddenly be translated from the home of my adoption to my dear native home I should not recognize the surroundings. Now the iron horse wends his tireless march where then the silence was only broken by a few passers by. The Model District (a school district located in the area of the intersection of Rawsonville and Martz Roads) my childhood home occupied my thoughts no little; there I saw the names of my own dear family. Sad changes have come there, but Time does it all. Some attribute our hard times to our Democratic President (Cleveland) and a neighbor lady says who would prefer bread and water and a Democratic President to faring sumptuously everyday with a Republican President. (Signed) Mrs. H. Brown Dillard.

It is a good thing that President Cleveland got married as it gives the dailies something to fill up with.

Working at the car wash

Sounds of water hitting the steel and wheel last weekend were music to the ears of the John Glenn High School students who gathered near the Westland Shopping Center for a fundraising day of soap and suds.

The students were members of one of the music groups at the school including the Concert, Jazz and Marching bands, as well as the Symphony and Orchestra. The event is an annual money-making drive conducted with the hope of raising much-needed funding for the various competitions and events the music groups participate in throughout the year.

Although the goal for the day was to wash and shine more than 500 cars, the 400 cars that pulled into the parking lot of the First Federal Bank parking lot at Warren and Wayne roads and the more than $4,000 raised throughout the day seemed reason enough to sit back and call the fundraising drive a sure success.

In the car wash, students accepted pledges of one penny per car before the day of the wash. Cost for getting one's Ford Escort, Chrysler Laser or Rolls Royce stretch limousine shined, buffed and sparkling clean was by donation.

And aside from the bucks earned during the day, not many students looked unhappy with their "work" as the suds flew, water sprayed and sounds of teenage laughter echoed loudly.

Glenn captures regional baseball crown

Final 4

For the first time in the school's long history, Westland John Glenn has reached the coveted "Final Four" - the state semi-finals of the Class A baseball championship. Coach Norm Hoenes and his Rockets made it to the semis by edging always-tough Plymouth Canton in and Monroe for the regional championship on Saturday conducted at Plymouth on Saturday. Glenn will meet Birmingham Brother Rice on Western Michigan University's diamond in Kalamazoo on Friday at 5:30 p.m. and the winner will return to the field at 3:30 p.m. Saturday to take on the winner of the Ypsilanti-Flint Central game for the state title. Westlanders make it to state's 'Final 4'

By KEITH DeMOLAY
ANP Special Writer

Being loyal is "being constant and faithful in any relation," and for the seniors on the Westland John Glenn baseball team, being loyal to the red, white and blue meant missing walking across the stage at the University of Michigan's Crisler Arena to receive a diploma and to play for - and win - the Class A Regional Baseball Championship at Plymouth Salem last Saturday.

That's what a handful of Rockets accomplished for their school and their city and for their team and their coach.

That loyalty of those seniors paid off in dividends for the Rockets this season, propelling them to a school record 26-2 mark, and a berth in the coveted "Final Four" teams that will clash this weekend to decide the 1986 state championship.

Glenn's title hopes have been powered by the pitching arm of Steve "Flamer" Irwin and Clint "Gamer" Straub so far in the state tournament, but there were other heroes and this week was like no other.

Irwin pitched in and out of trouble all morning but as someone once said: "He's a veteran who knows how to get by when he doesn't have his best stuff."

The 6 foot righthander proved that against Plymouth

Canton, a perennial state title threat, in the first game on Saturday. The Chiefs were a team that defeated the Rockets, 3-2, in 10 innings earlier in the campaign. The Rockets had them dead in their sights for revenge.

Both pitchers, however, were tough for three innings as neither Irwin nor the Canton hurler allowed any runner to cross the plate. Canton left two men on base in each of the first three innings, with Chris Sisler and Jeff Lyle getting as far as third base.

But, Irwin reached back for something extra each time for a pair of strikeouts and Glenn kept the game scoreless.

Glenn finally broke through in the fourth when Mike Ham-montree led off with a single. Two outs later, Jim Kenyon singled and Hammontree took third. A catcher's interference call while Chris Scheffer was batting loaded the bases before Mike Wells delivered the run with a single.

The Rockets made it 2-0 in the sixth when Kenyon doubled to lead off the inning. With two out, Tom Rogala singled him home and it was up to Irwin to Each contributed in his own way and Glenn's Mike Wells (at bat) provided the Rockets with a hit that helped the Westlanders turn back Plymouth Canton in the semi-final round of the regional playoffs. Coach Norm Hoenes's club went on to beat Monroe in the finals for their first ever regional baseball championship.

'Final 4'

hold off Canton in the seventh. Anthony Aiken led off the seventh with a double and Tom Kenyon singled, putting runners on first and third. Irwin bore down and fanned Sisler. A grounder to third couldn't bring in the runner and neither could the grounder to second baseman Pat Pettit who calmly threw it to first and Glenn advanced to meet Monroe for the championship.

Monroe probably wished they had never seen Plymouth after Glenn got done with them. The Westlanders, who had earlier this season beaten Salem on Salem's home field, 18-7, came back and buried Monroe, 17-1.

History also repeated when Clint Straub (alias Clinton) smacked a grand slam homer to put the icing on the championship cake. Earlier in the year, Straub had hit two homers at Salem.

But the big blow of the game in the fourth inning with the game tied at one-run apiece. Up stepped Chuck Hammon-tree with the bases loaded and out went the ball to the deepest part of the ball park. In came three runs and the Rockets led, 4-2, a lead they never relinquished.

Glenn kept building the lead to the eventual 13-run margin on the strength of two-run singles by Shawn Wilson and Mike Hammontree, an Irwin double, and a Rick Tavormina single.

Straub pitched a one-hitter, fanned seven en route to the crucial victory that moved Glenn into Friday's semi-final game against Birmingham Brother Rice.

The semi-finals will be staged beginning at 5:30 p.m. at Kalamazoo.

Belleville seeks 10K runners

Are you in shape to run 10 kilometers? The Kiwanis Club of Belleville, in conjunction with the Belleville Strawberry Festival, is staging its Ninth Annual Strawberry Run and is seeking participants.

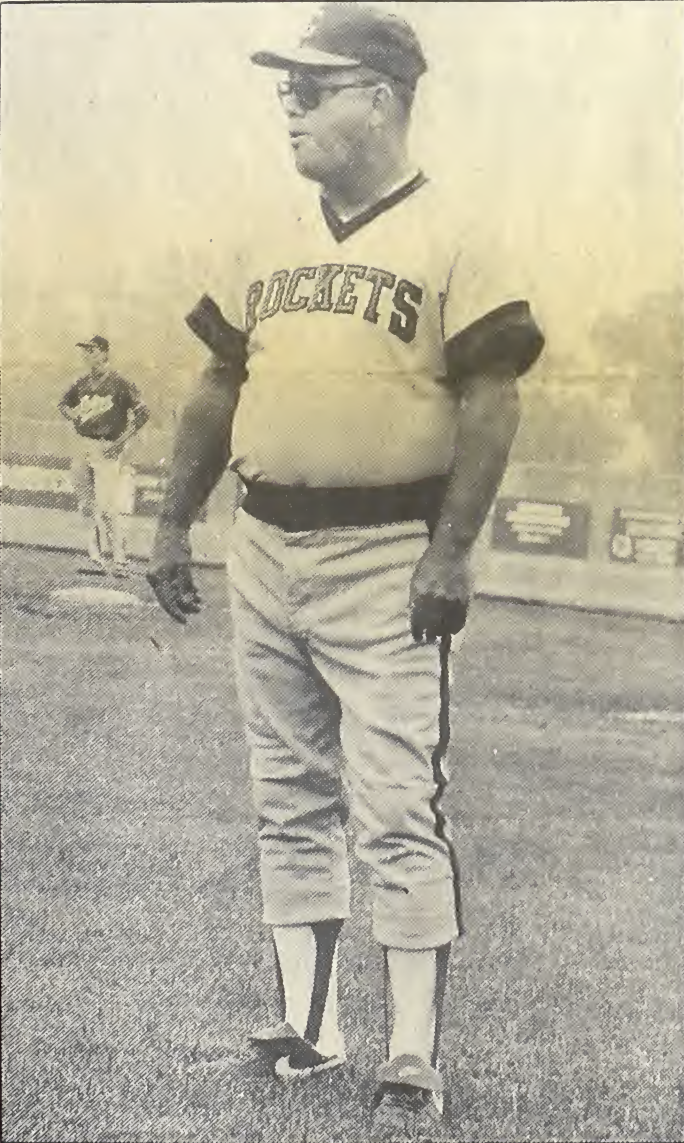

The program is divided in two phases: a 10K event, which will begin at 8 a.m. and a 1-mile affair at 8:15 p.m. scheduled for Saturday, June 21.

Registration will begin at 7 a.m. at Belleville High School, 501 W. Columbia Avenue, in Belleville.

There is a $3 entry fee and an additional charge of $4 if runners would like to purchase a T-Shirt. Medals will be awarded to the top two finishers in each age division for the 10 K run.

Ribbons also will be presented to those who participate in the 1-mile Fun Run and medals will be given to all runners 12 and under.

Those needing further information may contact Bill Chizmar, 13770 Haggerty Road, Belleville or telephone 697-8483 between 8:20 a.m. and 4:20 p.m. for further information.

Overseeing the field of action is Westland John Glenn first base coach Tom Walls. After winning the title, Glenn advances to the state playoffs which are scheduled for Friday afternoon in Kalamazoo on the facilities of Western Michigan University. ANP photo by Guy Warren

Dear old Dad

Romulus man tops contest list

A dad, who coaches his daughter's T-ball team and "doesn't mind when we get outs," has been named the Father of the Year by Associated Newspapers.

William Sovinski of River Oaks in Romulus was nominated for the honor by his daughter, Marjorie, because "he is a very good man."

Marjorie also wrote that her dad helps her with her homework and makes dinner when her mother is working.

"He also makes me get ready for bed and hears me read. He gives hugs and kisses," Marjorie continued. "He takes me to swimming class and goes roller skating with me." In conclusion, Marjorie wrote, "I love Dad and Billy and Katie (her brother and sister) do too."

As winner of the Father of the Year contest, Sovinski will receive a $50 gift certificate for clothing from Art Allen's Men's Wear in Wayne, a $50 gift certificate for sporting goods from Jack's Sport Shop in Wayne and $50 worth of services from All-American Wash-n-Wax in Wayne.

Selection of a winner was a difficult process because so many deserving dads were nominated by their sons and daughters. All of the entries were "winners" in that the children rated their fathers as "top dads."

William (Bill) Sovinski earned the title of "Father of the Year" after the Romulus man was nominated by his daughter, Marjorie, 6. Billy, 4, and Kaitlin, 18-months-old also think their dad is "tops."

Summertime canning? Don't sweat the berry details

By CHEF LARRY JANES
ANP Special Writer

I just couldn't resist. I visited the farmers market last Saturday and walked away with not just one, but two flats of strawberries. I mean, at only $6.50 per flat, how could I resist? On the way home, my mind was running as rampant as a Cuisinart looking at a five-pound hunk of cheese.

What would I do with all those berries? I could begin a shortcake marathon and once again renew my membership to Weight Watchers.

I thought about making 15 gallons of my famous strawberry daquiris but then I remembered how I feel the next morning.

I finally decided to "put them up".

(Editors' note: this is a fair warning about what to expect for Christmas '86!)

Now I do know that fall is the ideal time for preserving. I also know that in the fall I'm so bogged down with freezing zucchini, making tomato sauce, canning peaches, drying apples, on top of raking leaves and bating down the hatcheries for winter that I'm glad to get one thing done before the actual preserving season begins.

So what's needed to preserve those precious preserves? The following will be a short primer on preserving. . . First off, from mama's no fault "watch me do it" school of preserving, I remember her telling me to always start with slightly under-ripe and firm berries for maximum flavor and to ensure a good gel. Never, she said, never make double batches because the sugar could burn or that balance of pectin-to-sugar-to-acid could throw the whole pot off if allowed to boil longer than needed for larger quantities. Last but not least, follow the prescribed cooking times because even though the preserves look thin in the pan, they thicken up when allowed to cool.

With that knowledge and a case of screw-top jars and a six-pack under my belt, I began looking for equipment. All that was needed was a heavy-bottomed saucepan for even cooking, a soup ladle, a large wide pot to boil the jars in (those big corn pots will do) and some jars with rubber-edged flat lids and separate ring bands.

PLEASE NOTE: The rubber rings on the lids will not seal a second time around.

Next, I remember mama preparing the empty jars. Those days, our idea of a dishwasher was whomever's turn it was. These days, you can wash and sanitize the jars with one setting while the preserves are being made. If you prefer, you can bring the jars in a large pot to boil until you are ready to use them.

Cover the rings and lids in a small saucepot with water, bring to a boil, then turn off. Invert the jars onto a cooling rack or clean towel just before filling. Fill one jar with the boiling preserves, wipe the rim and threads of the jar with a clean towel, set a lid in place and screw on the ring. Repeat with the remaining jars.

Now the jars are ready to be processed in a water bath. Place them in the large, deep corn pot (or whatever) and cover with water by at least one inch. Boil for the time noted in each recipe, canning? Drop me a note with a self-addressed stamped envelope in care of this paper for an answer and solution to your problem!

GOLDEN CLOVE FRUIT MARMALADE
(makes 5 1/2 cups)
1 pound white grapefruit
3 oranges (1 1/2 pounds)
3/4 pound lemons
6 quarts cold water
1 1/2 teaspoons whole cloves
4 1/2 cups vanilla sugar

Discard tops and bottoms of grapefruit, 2 oranges and lemons. Score fruits vertically. Remove all but a smidgen of white pith from the peel. Cut peel into julienne strips. Bring 2 quarts of water and peel strips to a boil. Cook 5 minutes, drain. Repeat the process to remove added bitterness.

Remove peel and pith from remaining fruit. Chop pulp finely and remove seeds, but do not throw away. Place seeds, cloves and any membranes in a small bag of cheesecloth with the chopped pulp.

Add sugar to berries and let stand 10 minutes or until juices start to flow. (Some cooks like to cover them and let sit in the fridge overnight!)

Place berry-sugar mix in a 4-quart kettle and bring to a boil, stirring constantly till the sugar dissolves. Cook until berries are tender, about 3 minutes. Let stand overnight. Next morning, bring preserves to a boil and boil 1 minute. Cover and remove from heat and let stand 2 minutes. Stir for 4 minutes, skimming if necessary. Ladle into hot jars and process in boiling water for 5 minutes.

CHEF'S NOTE: Follow this simple technique to make delicious red raspberry preserves, just add the juice of 1 lemon.

4 FRUIT PRESERVE
(makes 4 pints)

1 quart sweet cherries, stemmed and pitted
1 quart strawberries, hulled
1 large orange, peeled and diced

2 cups drained, crushed pineapple

7 cups sugar
1/2 cup chopped walnuts (optional)

Combine all ingredients, except nuts, in a large saucepan, stir until sugar is dissolved. Cook over low heat, stirring frequently until mixture sheets from a spoon. Skim, add nuts. Ladle into sterilized hot jars, process into a hot water bath for 5 minutes.

Okay, so I couldn't resist, here's my recipe for the best tasting Strawberry Pie ever!

STRAWBERRY PIE
PASTRY FOR A 2-CRUST PIE

3 cups strawberries
1 cup strawberry juice
2 1/2 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca
1 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 teaspoon lemon juice
3 tablespoons sugar

Place strawberry juice in a heavy saucepan and add sugar, tapioca and cornstarch.

Heat rapidly, stirring frequently until thickening is complete. Boiling is not necessary, set aside to cool.

Add berries and lemon juice to cooled, thickened juice. Pour filling into a pastry lined 9 inch pie pan, adjust top crust; flute edges and cut some vents.

Bake in a hot (425 degree) oven for 30 minutes or until browned. For a browned undercrust, bake on the lowest oven shelf.

Allow to come to room temperature. Chill.

Serve with a big dollop of vanilla ice cream.

when finished cool to room temperature. To test for a tight seal, press the center of the lid: if it stays down, the seal is made, but if it pops up, place the jar in the fridge and use within a reasonable amount of time. Finally, label the jars and store in a cool, dry place.

Sound easy enough?

Too hard you say? Close your eyes for a minute and imagine some homemade preserves slowly melting into a toasted English Muffin. Trust me, it's worth it. Hey, look at it this way, part of your Christmas shopping will already be done!

Bon Appetit!

EASY-KA-BOBS

1 lb. Cooked Ham
1 16-oz. Can. Pineapple
1/2 lb. Fresh Mushrooms

While guests are waiting for the barbecue meal, fix some tiny Easy-Ka-Bobs by alternating squares of ham, chunks of pineapple and mushrooms on toothpicks. Place in aluminum foil on grill and baste with a mixture of pineapple juice and brown sugar blended together to make a thick sauce. Easy-Ka-Bobs cook in a few minutes and make excellent appetizers. Variations can be used to suit one's taste: green pepper pieces, green onions and cherry tomatoes can be alternated with the ham and a place of the pineapple-brown sugar sauce. (Keep ingredients sliced thin for rapid cooking.)

Carolyn Take it from me, you've got the best spinach spread in town. It's not my fault it didn't win. Debbie

To discover the meaning of W.E.L.S., I questioned, I struggled, I wouldn't give up hope. So in a last fleeting moment, I decided to telephone the Pope. "A nice bunch of people," he told me, ever so true. "But take it from me, friend, W.E.L.S. is not for you." So listening to his advice and using my own brain, I realized that following the way of W.E.L.S. would only be in vain. "Ask me about W.E.L.S.," the bumper sticker said. What a bunch of corn! Whoever put that little surprise on the back of my car may soon wish that they had not been born!
